WHERE THE HELL DO I BUILD THE FALCON BECAUSE I COULDN'T GET IT FROM A THRIFT SHOP

also make it so we can transfer data from our phone because i would like to continue off of there instead of making a new game. I play games for fun. So I avoid games that focuses on grinding - I just don't have the time for it.

Unfortunately, Event Horizon is one of such game.

I still try to bear with these games by cheating the grind, usually hacking the money. So I can focus back on the gameplay.

No joy with this game tho - it uses Unity engine AND it's anti cheat feature.

It's gonna take significant effort to hack.

If you enjoy grinding, feel free to buy this game.

If you're like me; just wanna play games + don't have a lot of free time - then avoid this game like plague.. Game really needs even a basic explanation as to what you should be doing. It's all trial and error which is incredible frustrating with zero direction.. A space rpg with a lot of ships to use and each ship has different layout which can be fitted with different modules and weapons. gameplay is fun and addictive.

There's a lot of grinding though, although this can be mitigated by building "carrier" ships and use them to passive grind. Combat is bad. No tutorial.. Awesome and fun game. My video and full reviews can be found by following the links below. Here's the short version.....

If you like retro space war games, but with way more depth, then this is an excellent game. Never played any of these old school games? No problem, pick this up and have fun as well. It has (limited) exploration, good game depth, lot's of spaceships, great battles, strategy, and nice gameplay mechanics. The upgrades and technologies available are impressive. Even in it's current state, which is way better than I expected, it's worth the price tag without a doubt. It is more completed than expected. You get a good game that can only get better. It gets an 8 out of 10 from me without hesitation!

Volledige Nederlands Review: <http://grandpagaming.blogspot.nl/2016/05/event-horizon-review-nederlands.html>. Don't buy this yet, unless like me you love exploration and ship customization.

There is enough of the game working for you to enjoy it. The customization options are huge, but the controls are finicky, and its lacking in a decent tutorial and tooltips, these are the things I'm hoping EA will add.. Very grindy game and quite some room for improvements. I mean bindable controls, anyone?! I really had to use AutoHotyKey to get special skills on my mouse. But although the game seems quite simple on first glance, it's also very addictive. Once you get started, you will want more items. Bigger ships and better weapons to try new tactics and to pay THEM back what THEY did to YOU. :) Yet if it hadn't been possible to get it to afk-auto-leveling to some degree, I had probably given up a long time ago, before the RSI syndrom kills my hand and arm completely. Anyway, it's still getting updates as of 2019 and I bought it 2016.

this a yeehaw game. Hella good man. Good game, although at some times it's all the same, BUT the need to improve ships and progressing finding new technologies makes it an addictive game, I guess that I'll have to reach a dead end at some point. But after 63 hrs on my mobile phone decided to play it on pc, and keep it at steady progress!!. this is a great game, though it is quite unfinished. though i mostly have played this on my phone (before i discovered that it is on pc), i still feel able to comment on this.

some good/bad points:

bad:

- o the gameplay is not very diverse: sure, there are many ships and modules, but the fighting gets REALLY boring 10-15 hours in (as said before, i have played a lot on my phone, too). it takes a long time to get better ship classes, and thus the player will use 1-2 ships for a long time until a new ship class is unlocked.
- o it takes an EXTREMELY EXTREME amount of time to get good ships, money, and tech.
- o no story
- o planetary exploration is not worth it until the player either has A LOT of money or A LOT of research invested in it.
- o some, though few, bugs.
- o very few & very rare special encounters, and they quickly become boring too.
- o traders usually don't have good things.
- o it's the same music every time.
- o faction research is rare.
- o it is hard/takes a long time to figure out the game.
- o there can be no real/game changing changes to the ships, such as an extra gun.
- o it takes a long time to undermine bases.
- o bad/no descriptions of modules.
- o the player can not use it's mouse to move it's ship.

good:

- o the player can modify their ships & the modules are well made.
- o it is possible to buy tech from traders.
- o stable gameplay.
- o cheap and fitting price.
- o the enemy has different play styles (although the guerilla/dodge style is really frustrating and boring).
- o good game.. the game glitches when i try to open it and i cannot get in
